EBBF (www.ebbf.org) the European Bahá'í Business Forum, an international NGO representing businesspeople across 70 countries and dedicated to inspiring responsible business practices provides us with an overview and basic understanding of many of the ethical financial trends currently bubbling up around the planet with the relaunch of its ever popular EBBF Ethical Finance Knowledge Centre.

Enter the search term "ethical finance" into your favorite search engine and most often you will find that EBBF's Ethical Finance Knowledge Center pops up as the number one link in over 4 million references on this dynamic and evolving sector.

This may be due to an encouraging trend EBBF has observed among financial institutions that finance is on its way to re-discover its instrumental function in support of the economy with an increasing consideration of environmental, social and governance issues in investment decisions and services being offered. These values-based decision criteria, services and institutions are the subject of this knowledge center.

An introduction to Socially Conscious Hedge Funds, Environment and Energy Focused Finance Gender Finance, Bio-diversity Finance, Faith-based Finance, and Solidarity Finance among other ethical financial subjects are discussed. Many of the major investors in ethical finance are also identified.

"While recognizing the irresponsible practices of some banks and financial institutions, this knowledge centre focuses on the many positive and essential financial services being rendered by this profession." said the co-author of the Knowledge Centre, EBBF's President and former McKinsey & Co. senior partner George Starcher and added "This ethical finance knowledge centre recognises the pivotal role of the financial community in addressing global social, environmental and governance challenges."

"Global finance changed into a sort of self-ruling and self-feeding mechanism that is able to produce money without a proper link to the underlying transactions." said Irene Tosti, co-author, "The financial crisis has proved this evolution unsustainable and I strongly believe that finance will evolve into a tool with the flexibility to integrate non-monetary values into the existing framework."
